These are facts. We do not mean to disseriously injured this city is courteous, but as his acquaintances. without effect.

transportation from Richmond injured both Richmond and Lynchburg. And so it did. We say that Richmond is the city of Virginia which has established its title to eminence, and that the facts of her rise prove that she has the force and consistency to rise under serious disadvantages and in My Pet Book. Edited by UNCLE HERBERT spite of the neglect of the State and combinations that were made to subordinate her to other places. We assert, therefore, that efforts to build up other places to her prejudice have only injured her to the advantage of no other place.

We therefore contend that Richmond is possessed of natural advantages which make her the real defender of the commercial welfare of Virginia. Her prosperity will be the sure prosperity of Virginia, and ful books. her neglect and detriment must be the neglect and injury of the commercial consequence and thrift of the Commonwealth. Furthermore, we are firm in the belief that ber sister cities can best secure their own advantage and growth by befriending Richmond and facilitating those just and systematic measures which are best calculated to maintain the commercial strength and ment of the consequence and wealth of of the 20th December contains a very in-Richmond. This is the way, and the only teresting communication, by the Rev. Dr. way, in our opinion, to promote the prosperity of all our cities. Towards them all Richmond entertains the fealty of friendship-friendship that is heightened and in- affording as it does some very good reading, tensified by their community of interest and and especially to our readjusting friends. political allegiance.

We speak no partially-considered words in speaking thus. We speak from the deepest source of feeling and from the profoundest convictions.

Our friend of the Virginian concluded an article which was partly an effort to show that Richmond was only partially excusable for her complaints, and that in the times"; another "for drinking to excess matter of cooperation about the proposition for a railway along the James-River valley (we quote the words): "Lynchburg must take care of herself; and she fully concedes the same right to big Richmond.

We cannot say that this was calculated to warm us up on a cold day or inspire a hope for a moderation of the temperature. But, having the habit of hoping against hope, we preferred to look behind the remark and rely upon the natural sympathies that existed and the mutual interests that must make Lynchburg and Richmond auxiliary to each other. So we have in the Lynchwhich we make the following extract :

Editors Dispatch: The Religious Hera Sydnor, of the October centennial services at Tussekiah church, in Lunenburg county, Va. It is respectfully asked of the Dispatch to reproduce the following extract. Read the first class of cases of discipline

It is both amusing and edifying to note some of the cases of discipline that were brought before the Church. A member was excluded " for not paying his just debts" another "for trading on Sundays"; another "for telling of falsities"; another "for vain discourse and shameful acting" another "for getting drunk at sundry at Lunenburg Courthouse, that being a public place"; another "for swearing and playing cards." Members were often censured "for not attending church-meetings," and "for not hearing the Church.' The frivolous and fascinating amusement of dancing gave the Church much trouble. A widow lady was brought under dealing "for sending her daughters to the dancing school." She was gravely admonished that the rod would be more effective in improv ing their manners than the dance.
